NOTE TO THE USERS

Communications Division compiles a Monthly Digest which contains excerpts from documents which use Statistics Canada data.

The Statistics Canada Library presently monitors special interest periodicals, journals and other documents and searches relevant data bases for material to be included.

Subject matter divisions have been asked to forward any material that they may receive directly.

Should you see any relevant references to Statistics Canada or its data, could you please forward a copy to 3rd floor, R.H.Coats, Attention: Digest.

NOTE AUX UTILISATEURS

La Division des communications compile des extraits de documents qui contiennent des références aux données de Statistique Canada pour former L'Argus un recueil mensuel.

En collaboration avec elle, la bibliothèque de Statistique Canada dépouille des périodiques et autres documents spécialisés et effectue des recherches dans des bases de données susceptibles de contenir du matériel pertinent.

Les divisions spécialisées ont été invitées à apporter leur concours à la Division des communications en lui envoyant les articles qu'elle sont les seules à recevoir.

Si vous aussi trouvez dans un article des références pertinentes à Statistique Canada ou à ses données, vous êtes priés d'en faire parvenir une copie au 3e étage de l'immeuble R.H. Coats, avec la mention: L'Argus.

II. CURRENT CONTENTS LIST / TABLE DES MATIÈRE PERIODIQUES

The Current Contents List contains the tables of contents in alphabetical order by title of periodicals received during the month and chosen from a list of 60 popular periodicals (see attached list).

The issues contained in each Current Contents List are available for you in the reading area, on the display shelf of reserved periodicals. We would ask you to please come in person (or send one of your staff) to photocopy or read the desired material in the library.

PLEASE NOTE that, unfortunately, library staff cannot be spared to do the large amount of photocopying the List is expected to generate, and consequently is not able to accept telephone calls requesting photocopies.

We have, however, made a photocopier available in the reading area for your convenience.

If you would like to suggest titles to be added to the Current Contents List, or give your comments, please call the Reference Desk at 990-8219.

A complete list of the periodicals the library receives is also available for examination at the Reference Desk.

Les Tables des matières périodiques renferment, par ordre alphabétique, les tables des matières des périodiques qui sont reçus au cours du mois et qui sont choisis parmi environ 60 périodiques populaires (voir la liste des titres ci-jointe).

Les numéros figurant dans chaque édition des Tables des matières périodiques sont à votre disposition dans la salle de lecture de la bibliothèque sur le présentoir des périodiques réservés et doivent être consultés sur place. Nous vous demandons de bien vouloir vous présenter en personne (ou envoyer un membre de votre personnel) pour photocopier ou lire les documents voulus.

ARTICLES

8 Beyond the Fringes/By Caryl Conner. To tax or not to tax fringe benefits and perks?

18 1040 or Fight: The Reagan Tax Revolution/By David Hale. If it ever gets rolling, the revolution could have a profound effect on the economy's performance. Yet the debate over the Treasury proposals has so far been narrowly focused on specifics.

24 What's Wrong With the Right to Know? /By James T. O'Reilly. Spurred by the accident at Union Carbide's plant in Bhopal, India, community right-to-know laws are expected to become a hot legislative topic in 1985 and beyond.

30 Getting on the Japanese Wavelength /By Mark Zimmerman. The first rule is: Don't grab the mike. The second: Know the difference between tatemae and honne. The third and most important: Take care to build ningen kankei.

38 Much Ado About Global Marketing /By John Thackray. "A snare and a delusion," say some of his critics. "Simply banal," others scoff. "Just a ploy by advertising agencies to get more business," charges one academic. Why are they saying such terrible things about Theodore Levitt's proposal, and is it of any use?

47 The CEO Today: A Statesman's World View/Sir Reay Geddes Interviewed by Harold Stieglitz.

55 A Rewarding Position for Managers on Weekends/By David Nye. The parched desert of TV business coverage is suddenly in bloom—on cable. Our reviewer looks at one of the more congenial new shows, Management Report.

THE NEXT 200 YEARS

John B. Aird, Lieutenant Governor of Ontario

In his article the author writes, "Like change, the nuclear threat is one which reaches deep into our personal lives, which compels us to act out new roles, and which confronts us with the danger of a new unsettling psychological disease - a paralysis of will, or nuclear inertia. It is, I think, responsible for much of the bewilderment, frustration and disorientation that plagues Canadian society". He feels that we must recapture the capacity to live with danger, as our ancestors did, without being overwhelmed by it. "The role of optimism and determination in our nation's success is not just a matter of historical record. It is a fact which history has underlined time and time again".

CANADA HAS IGNORED INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY RIGHTS: OUR RESEARCHERS PAY THE PRICE

Donald N. Thompson

Throughout the industrialized world, patent acts and similar provisions such as plant breeders' rights legislation, are used to encourage and support research and innovation by protecting the potential return on that investment. Patent acts are also argued to promote the disclosure of research results, and of industrial processes, providing a broad dissemination of new knowledge. But Canadians don't seem to agree. We are the only western nation not to provide protection to inventors of new plant varieties. We are the only industrialized nation to effectively allow no patent protection to inventors of new medicines or foods. In this article the author examines the lack of protection in these areas in Canada, and its impact on Canadian research efforts. He adds, "If compulsory licensing is not changed, then we are likely to see a decade in which Canada remains at the bottom of the list of developed countries in these areas".

VIEWPOINT: THE AUDIT - AN IRRELEVANCY TO NEW INNOVATIVE BUSINESSES?

Michael Needham

In his Viewpoint article the author, who canvassed some of the managers of new innovative businesses (NIBS), discusses why there is an intense dissatisfaction among these managers with the audit function. He examines the services they are looking for and he suggests ways in which auditors can improve their services to new innovative businesses. "And remember", he adds, "NIBS are the accountants growth market of the '80's!"

THE NEW COMPETITIVE WORLD IN THE TELEVISION INDUSTRY - A U.S. MANUFACTURER'S RESPONSE

Tomasz Mroczkowski

Under formidable competitive pressures, organizations most threatened by overseas competition have begun to readjust and change. Some have completely pulled out of business, others have opted for joint ventures with their competitors. Many have launched significant change programs designed to improve their productivity and performance, reduce costs and improve product quality. The author points out that traditional organizational change theory does not offer ready "solutions" that can be easily applied in the totally new competitive situation of the 1980's. The issues have become international and much of the debate revolves around how much of Japanese management practice can, and should, U.S. organizations assimilate. Foreign technology is most easily absorbed but should American organizations also adopt Japanese-type human resource management systems? Or alternatively should they seek to promote employee commitment by exploiting rather than abandoning traditional American work culture. The author believes, to shed light on this important controversy, there is an urgent need to compile case studies of how successful programs have been implemented in concrete organizations. This article assesses the change process launched by an important American TV manufacturer - the General Electric Video Products Division - which has decided to take world competitors head on and become "number one" in the industry.

Inside this issue

Corporate strategists and planners are bracing for the next round (cover story). It may be a tough bout, say the authors of a special four-article theme report on corporate strategies.

William A. Dimma, President and CEO of Royal LePage Limited, leads off with a ten-point plan to cope with change (p. 6). Adjusting to a global economy (p. 9) may not be easy, writes Sylvia Ostry, Ambassador for Multilateral Trade Negotiations, External Affairs Canada. Allen Janger, Executive Director of the Management Systems Program at The Conference Board, Inc., New York, analyses the post-recovery management imperative (p. 13). The CEO's view of political and social change is analysed (p. 18) by Cassandra Blair, Research Associate in the Public Affairs Research Division of The Conference Board of Canada.

The Canadian economy is expected to show modest, yet sustainable, growth in 1985 in spite of a trade slowdown, according to the latest survey of economic forecasters, says Brian Hollohan, an economist in the National Economic Forecasting and Analysis Group of The Conference Board of Canada (p. 2).

The basics of inflation are not as well understood as those of unemployment, says Ernie Stokes, Director of the New Product Development Group of The Conference Board of Canada (p. 21).

Larry Murphy, Director of Corporate Planning and Business Policy, and Chief Economist at Gulf Canada Limited, analyses policy priorities for renewed economic growth from the oil and gas industry's perspective (p. 27).

In the push for regulatory reform, business and government must both compromise, says Larry Jones, Associate Professor of Public Management and Co-chair of the Canadian Studies Programme at the University of Oregon (p. 35).

Low-cost hydro is called "blue gold" by Richard Zuker, Associate Director, Energy Division, Economic Council of Canada, because provinces are passing up potential revenue by giving consumers inexpensive electricity (p. 40).

With the Canada-U.S. tax treaty now in effect, Roy Hogg, Partner in charge of the Tax Division, Arthur Andersen & Co., re-examines the treaty's impact on business and individual taxation (p. 44).

Perhaps the question by Guy Stanley, Managing Partner, Public Issues Group, John Doherty and Company Inc. "Could Markets Run the Social Services?" is not just a rhetorical one (p. 48).

Free trade zones will soon account for 20 per cent of world trade, reports Nicolas Papadopoulos, Associate Professor of Marketing at the School of Business, Carleton University (p. 51).

Canada and China would benefit from increased trade, says Zhao Deyan, Professor at the Department of Economics, Wuhan University and The Institute for the Study of the U.S. and Canadian Economies (p. 56).
